Course content

This course offers a broad introduction to normative theory in international relations as well specialization on specific issues within this area of research. The themes covered in the course include distributive justice, international law, democracy promotion, political self-determination, migration, and war. The course offers the students a possibility to critically scrutinize different proposals for a more just, democratic, and legitimate world order.

Learning outcomes

Upon completion of the course students should be able to:

1.Knowledge and understanding

- Account in oral as well as written for alternative conceptions of: sources of legitimate international actions; subjects of legitimate international action; migration, democracy, self-determination, justice, and legitimate violence in international relations.

2.Skills and abilities:

- Identify and analyze normative judgments of international politics as well as their empirical or other preconditions.
- Apply normative theories to practical normative problems in international politics.

3. Evaluation and approach:

- Evaluate normative judgments of international politics as well as their empirical or other preconditions.
- Relate theoretical themes distinguished in the first course aim to each other, by means of independently pursued comparison, critique, or synthesis of two or more of the theoretical themes.
- Apply normative theories to practical normative problems in international politics.

Education

The course is organized as a series of compulsory seminars with high degree of student activity. The seminars are compulsory. Information about how absences may be compensated will be distributed at the beginning of the course.

Forms of examination

Examination will be in written form, undertaken continuously in conjunction with teaching and/or at the end of the course.

For the grading, the course will employ a scale of seven steps, where A, B, C, D and E signify multiple degrees of pass, and F and Fx signify two degrees of fail. The grading is based on assessment criteria that will be distributed at the beginning of the course. It may be possible for a student to supplement the examination task if the grade is Fx and if information about this possibility is included in the supervising description of the course. In such cases the complementary work must be submitted within a week from when the examining teacher has informed the student about the task. If the complementary task is accepted and has the character of supplementing a lack of understanding, a minor misunderstanding, minor errors, or too limited discussions for some part, the grade E will be applied. If the complementary task is accepted and has the character of correcting simple formal errors the grades A-E will be applied. A student that has received a passing grade may not take part in a re-examination in order to obtain a higher grade. Students who have failed the course twice have the right to request another examiner. This request should be addressed to the departmental unit that has appointed the examiner.

Interim

When the course is no longer offered or when its content has been significantly modified, the student has the right to be examined according to this syllabus once each semester during a period of three semesters
