Course content

The course offers an introduction to political economics with a focus on the political economy of development, and provides detailed knowledge on a number of important topics at the research frontier. It comprises two main components. The first component covers competing theories on the motives of politicians and how and why politics can lead to market imperfections. The second component is dedicated to a set of important topics within the political economy of development including political institutions, social institutions, the interaction between institutions and culture, violence and conflict, and social mobilization and protests.

Learning outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student is expected to be able to:

- give an account of the central aspects of political economics;
- apply the fundamental theoretical and empirical tools;
- have a good understanding of issues that are on the research agenda.

Education

Instruction is given in the form of lectures which also include time for going through prepared calculation exercises. The language of instruction is English.

Forms of examination

Grading is done on the basis of a written examination. Students may be awarded examination credits through partial examination consisting of voluntary written assignments during the course. The credits awarded through the partial examination are only valid for the regular and retake examination opportunities of the current semester. However, it is always possible to achieve full marks on the examination and the course by only completing the written examination.

Students will receive letter grades on a seven-point scale related to the learning objectives of the course: Passing grades are A, B, C, D and E, where A is the highest grade and E the lowest. Failing grades are F and Fx, where F is lower than Fx.

Assessment criteria:

- A (Excellent): The student has a very well developed overall picture of the central aspects of political economics and is able to analyse the course elements independently in a very competent fashion, both theoretically and empirically.
- B (Very Good): The student has a good overall picture of the central aspects of political economics and is capable of analysing the course elements independently, both theoretically and empirically.
- C (Good): The student has a good understanding of the central aspects of political economics and is able to analyse the course elements relatively independently, both theoretically and empirically.
- D (Satisfactory): The student is familiar with the elementary aspects of political economics. The student has satisfactory knowledge of the research issues dealt with in the course and is somewhat capable of conducting an independent analysis of its elements.
- E (Adequate): The student is familiar with the elementary aspects of political economics and the research issues dealt with in the course and is somewhat able to independently analyse the course elements.
- Fx (Inadequate): The student is only able to give an account of some aspects of political economics and has a very limited ability to conduct an independent analysis within this field.
- F (Totally Inadequate): The student is unable to give an account of the elementary aspects of political economics and is unable to analyse the different elements of the course independently.

If students fail a course unit and receive the grade Fx or F in an examination, there are no restrictions on how many times they are allowed to retake the examination in order to obtain a grade of E or higher.

Interim

If this course is discontinued, students have the right to be examined on the course once per semester for three further semesters.
