Course content

The course is interdisciplinary and includes specialization and deepening in a subject related to cultural evolution. The student plans and carries out a project work within the subject. The topic of the project work is defined in consultation with teachers and must be linked to the emergence, spread and/or change of human culture. The project work should be theoretically anchored in one or more research fields in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, economics or law.

Learning outcomes

After completing the course, the student is expected to be able to:

- identify an issue that is relevant to the research field cultural evolution
- place an issue within a relevant specific research field from the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, economics or law, and relate it to a more general context related to cultural evolution
- independently search and compile scientific information that is relevant to the issue
- analyse, critically evaluate and discuss the results of the completed project work
- present the project results in writing and orally and argue for their interpretations and conclusions

Education

Teaching consists of supervision, project work and seminars. The course is offered in English.

Forms of examination

a. The course is examined as follows: Assessment takes place through written and oral presentations. Examination is conducted in English.

The examiner can decide on adapted or alternative examination formats for students with disabilities.

b. A passing final grade requires participation in seminars. If special reasons exist, following consultation with the teacher involved, the examiner may grant the student exemption from the obligation to participate in certain compulsory instruction.

c. Grading: The course's final grade is set according to a seven-point criterion-referenced scale:

A = Excellent

B = Very good

C = Good

D = Satisfactory

E = Adequate

Fx = Failed, some additional work is required

F = Failed, much additional work is required

d. The course's grading criteria are handed out at the start of the course.

e. Students who receive a failing grade on a regular examination are allowed to retake the examination as long as the course is still provided. The number of examination opportunities is not limited. Other mandatory course elements are equated with examinations. A student who has received a passing grade on an examination may not retake the examination to attain a higher grade. A student who has failed the same examination twice is entitled to have another examiner appointed, unless there are special reasons to the contrary. Such requests should be made to the department board. The course includes at least three examination opportunities per academic year the course is offered. For the academic years that the course is not offered, at least one examination opportunity is offered.

f. Students awarded the grade Fx are given the opportunity to improve their grade to E. The examiner decides on the supplementary assignments to be performed and the pass mark criteria. The supplementary assignments will take place before the next examination opportunity.

Interim

Students may request that the examination be conducted in accordance with this course plan even after it has ceased to be valid. However, this may not take place more than three times over a two-year period after the course was discontinued. Requests must be made to the departmental board. The provision also applies in the case of revisions of the course syllabus and revisions of the required reading.

Misc

This course can be taken as part of a Master's programme at the university, but may also be taken as a separate course.

The course is given in collaboration with the Centre for Cultural Evolution and the Department of Archaeology and Classical Studies.

Required reading

The required reading is decided by the department board and published on the course page in the course catalogue at least 2 months before the start of the course.
