- Different measures to counteract crime, their preventive effects and their damages.
- The development of crime policy over time
- Crime and punishment through a framework of gender theory

Learning outcomes

The overall aim of the introductory course to criminology is for the student to acquire basic knowledge of the points of departure of criminology, terms and definitions, methods suited to the study of criminological research questions, theories regarding criminality and crime prevention. Furthermore, course aims include for the student to:

- Be able to utilize and understand criminological research. This further entails that students be able to reflect on and criticize their reading material from a theoretical, methodological and scientific point of view. More specifically, upon completing the course students are expected to:
- Accurately describe and utilize criminological terminology.
- Describe and problematize the extent and structure of criminality (based on crime statistics and alternate sources).
- Describe, utilize and problematize criminological theories regarding the causes of crime and criminality.
- Describe criminological research methods, relate methodological choices to research questions, and discuss and problematize these choices based in their advantages and disadvantages.
- Discuss crime policy measures and their efficiency, the damages they cause, and their historical theoretical grounds.
- Outline a terminology of gender theory and reflect on its relevance for criminological theory and research.

Education

All education is conducted via an Internet based learning platform. The education, which is mandatory, consists of different forms of group based learning activities such as study blogs and learning dialogues, as well as individual multiple-choice tests. On occasion we have meetings on site at the university consisting of seminars and lectures, however these are not mandatory. It is possible to complete the course in its entirety online. Moreover, you will be given the opportunity to test your knowledge with voluntary multiple-choice tests.

Forms of examination

- The course is examined as follows: Written exam, study blogs, learning dialogues and multiple-choice tests.
- Course grades are awarded in accordance with a criterion-based seven point grading scale: A = Excellent B = Very good C = Good D = Satisfactory E = Adequate Fx = Inadequate F = Completely inadequate
- The grading criteria will be distributed to students at the start of the course.
- In order to receive a final grade for the whole course, students must be awarded at least grade E for all course modules.
- Students who are awarded grades Fx and F in relation to the examination of part of the course have the right to re-examination on at least four occasions for as long as the course continues to be taught in order to achieve at least grade E. Students who have been awarded grade E or above cannot undergo re-examination in order to achieve a higher grade. Students who have been awarded the grades Fx and F twice in connection with an examination by the same examiner, have the right to request that another examiner be appointed to determine their grade for the examination. Such a request is to be addressed to the director of studies.

Interim

In cases where the course is no longer taught, or where the essentials of the course content have been altered, the student has the right for a period of three terms to be examined once per term in accordance with this course plan.

Misc

The course was previously given with the course code AK1110.
