Course content

The course comprises ten weeks of work placement. As the concluding part in the Master's programme, the aim of this course is to prepare the student for future employment and create contacts within the labour market. The placement will be in e.g. museums, rescue excavation firms, or other employers involved within the heritage market.

Learning outcomes

Having completed the course the student has:

- gained experience of the labour market.
- demonstrated the ability to independently conduct the tasks that an archaeologist needs to understand and carry out.
- demonstrated a capability to cooperate with colleagues and conduct research towards a joint goal.

Education

The course is in the form of a practical placement in a work place and in the writing of a logbook.

Forms of examination

- The following method of examination is through obligatory attendance and the oral account and submission of a logbook.
- Grades are given according to a criterion referenced two-point scale.
G = Pass
U = Fail
- The grading criteria for this course are to be distributed at the beginning of the course.

d) In order to obtain a grade for the course pass (G) is needed.

e) In the event of failing the course students with the grade U (fail) on the placement have the right to conduct another period of placement as long as the course is given in order to obtain G (pass). A student who has received the grade Fail twice on a given test by the same examiner can, on application, be granted a new examiner, unless there are specific reasons against it. The application should be addressed to the board of the department.

Interim

When the course is no longer offered or its contents have been essentially revised, the student has the right to be examined according to this course syllabus once per semester for a three-semester period. However, the restrictions above still hold.

Limitations

This course cannot be included in a degree together with a passed course, within the country or abroad, in which the content fully or partly overlaps with that of this course.

Required reading

This depends on the work placement. Literature that has been read should be documented in the submitted logbook, which will be archived at the department.
